SELECT ECONOMIC CHARACTERISTICS FOR MANSFIELD

Data Sources: 2000 Census & 2010 American Community Survey (3-Year Estimates)

Note: Due to limited data availability at the town level for 2010, margins of error have been included for reference. In many cases, the margin of error is significant.

Employment

The employment data is one of the clearest indicators of the way in which the student population skews the overall data for Mansfield. While the number of residents age 16 and older was estimated at 23,819 in 2010, only 12,331 (51.8%) were estimated to be in the labor force. In comparison, 75.4% of people over the age of 16 in Tolland were estimated to be in the labor force.

Income

Income data has been provided both for households (which include all people occupying a housing unit, including unrelated individuals, but does not include group quarters such as dormitories) and families (which include two or more people related by birth, marriage or adoption and residing together). The difference between household income and family income is another indicator of the impact of the student population. The median income for families in 2010 is estimated to be over $84,000, whereas the median income for households is estimated to be just over $62,000. Additionally, 19.9% of households reported incomes less than $25,000 in 2010 as compared to 7.6% of families. As with all of the data included in this summary, the margins of error for the 2010 data are significant and should be considered.

Additional notes regarding income statistics:

There is a tendency for people to under-report income as part of these surveys

Income does not include non-cash benefits such as food stamps, health insurance, and other benefits provided by an employer such as transportation, education, etc.

Poverty Level

The data available on families whose income is below the poverty level does indicate an increase of approximately 2.8% from 2000, with a corresponding increase of 8.7% for families with children under 18. The data for individuals again shows the impact of the student population in both 2000 and 2010, as there is a significant difference between the number of individuals over the age of 18 whose income is below the poverty level (estimated 19.9% in 2010) as compared to individuals over the age of 65 (estimated 6.4% in 2010). As with all of the data included in this summary, the margins of error for the 2010 data are significant and should be considered.

PERCENTAGE OF FAMILIES AND PEOPLE WHOSE INCOME IS BELOW THE POVERTY LEVEL
Notes: As a reference, the 2010 weighted poverty threshold for a family of four was $22,314, for an individual it was $11,139. As with other statistics, the margins of error for the 2010 data are significant.

Housing Costs as a Percentage of Household Income

The information on housing costs as a percentage of household income provides information for both owners and renters. Yet again, the impact of the student population can be seen in the dramatic difference between owner costs and gross rent, with over 55% of households paying more than 35% of monthly income in rent, as opposed to 20.3% of owners paying more than 35% in monthly owner costs. Generally, it is recommended that housing costs be no more than 25-30% of monthly income. An estimated 75.5% of owners and 36.2% of renters paid less than 30% of their income on housing costs in 2010. As with all of the data included in this summary, the margins of error for the 2010 data are significant and should be considered.
